The People Living on That Gem of the Ohio River Are Angry.

AND THEY ARE VERY ANGRY, TOO.

Again Threatened With Neglect by the Ohio Connecting Company.

WERE THE REPRESENTATIVES BOUGHT?

The owners of Brunot Island are mad. It is drawing it exceedingly mild to put it in that way, for they are red hot and still heating, and the trouble is that they think they have been sold out, sacrificed in the interest of an electric railway company

When the Ohio Connecting Railway Company began to talk about building its bridge, the island owners thought they saw an opporpany began to talk about building its bridge, the island owners thought they saw an opportunity to connect themselves with Allegheny City and the Southside, so as to get something better than the step-child treatment they have been accustomed to for the last 18 or 20 years. So they proposed that the company should include some kind of a bridge that would answer to carry some kind of a bridge that would answer to carry some kind of a life government, which is the basis of all free government, which is he company should answer to carry some kind of radge that would answer to carry some kind of motor radiway from Preble avenue. Alle-heey, to Nimick avenue, Southside, with con-ection with Brunot Island, it being supposed hat as the company had authority to build a nection with Brunot Island, it being supposed that as the company had authority to build a toll bridge there would be sufficient inducement. After hope deferred had made the islanders' hearts sick they finally decided that if they could only get a foot-walk on the bridge from the island to the shore end of the Ninth ward, Allegheny, it would be better than nothing, as their children could then go to school independent of flood or ice floes. They thought they would at least get that much, but from what has transpired within a few days it seems they are to be left to breakfast, dine and sup off cold shoulder for some time yet to come.

An attempt was made to get an expression of opinion from Mr. Thomas McFadden relative to insinuations that some members of Allecheny councils had sold the islanders out in order to make terms with the railway companies whereby the latter should build an expensive bridge to connect an electric railway on California avenue with Bellevue, but Mr. McFadden was somewhat in the same frame of mind as the expiring Irishman, who, when asked by his confessor if he renunneed the able that it is a swill tend to prevent disorder and conduct of the people to such regulation as will tend to prevent disorder and crime, while at the same time within the limits of temperance complete liberty of action is allowed. It is the true business of the law in the traffic in liquors as in every other business to prevent the abuse and not the law in the traffic in liquors as in every other business to prevent the abuse and not the law in the traffic in liquors as in every other business to prevent the abuse and not the law in the traffic in liquors as in every other business to prevent the abuse and not the law in the traffic in liquors as in every other business to prevent the abuse and not the law in the traffic in liquors as in every other business. as other kickers, and he in common with the rest, was at white heat. The action proposed was published a day or two since in the report of Allegheny Council committee proceedings. It is charged that though some members of Councils had agreed though some members of Councils had agreed that the island should have some consideration it is now being left in the cold. The bridge company, it is admitted, can take the ground necessary to do its work without building anything in return, but it is held that by proper management arrangements could be made mutually satisfactory, as even a corporation wishes to have the good will of a municipality when it doesn't cost too much, but the islanders think the company considers them small potatoes as against corporate interests that can command more cash. The islanders claim that the Ninth ward of Allegheny is now about monopolized by railway companies that paying tax for its benefit.

THE ISLAND HAS BEEN A SATRAPY. The modern history of Brunot Island shows it to have been a rather doleful and expensive experience. It never got much for its taxes, but Mr. McFadden states that when it belonged to a Southside township they were light and not much complained of. Finally the late Benton Kerr and others by some neans had it detached from the Southside and added to McClare township. Then McClare township was taken into Allegheny City and the island's troubles began. There are about 125 acres of arable land on it, and it is owned by some 30 people. Since they have been annexed to Allegheny City they have paid between $15,000 and $20,000 in taxes and haven't gotten a mill in return, for the inhabitants say that to send their children to the city school costs more than would the maintenance of a school on the island beside the danger attendant and the inability to transport them over the river during a considerable portion of each year. Then they complain that they are not provided with paved streets nor even roads of any kind, and have onged to a Southside township they were

NEITHER POLICE NOR FIRE

From time to time the islanders have been classing various mirages. Occasionally a proposition has been put out to buy the island and make it a park, and various other things have been suggested, but each time as the people began to think they were about to catch up with the delusions they were dissipated.

The people who live in the upper must go to the lower end of the island to connect with a landing and street, and must pay right of way from home into another part of the same ward. Long ago, when it was occupied sciely by Dr. Brunot, it was about the most delightful spot about Pittsburg, and in the general absence of roads and other facilities for communication the isolation was not felt, but while the general advance in material progress has not the general advance in material progress has not made garden stuff now any better on Brunot than it did half a century ago, and has not en-hanced the price of its products, rallways have brought Central Ohio practically as near to the

PROHIBITION QUESTION.

The Well-Known Lawyer Tells Why He is Opposed to the Amendment Succinctly and Forcibly-It is a Blow at Free Gov-

The Evening News of Franklin, Pa. which circulates extensively among Prohibitionists, and in fact is understood to lean somewhat toward the cold water cause, has been fair enough to print an interesting communication regarding the amendment issue from the pen of James D. Hancock, Esq., leading counsel for the Allegheny Valley Railroad, and one of the foremost lawyers of Northwestern Pennsylvania. Mr. Hancock's remarks are pertinent and

BUFFALO, May 29, 1889.

J. S. McGarry, Esq., Chairman: DEAR SIR-In reply to your request that the basis of all tree government, which is that the citizen shall have full liberty to eat, drink and act as he pleases, subject to such limitations as are necessary for the mnintenance and good order of society.

This principle, subject to these limitations, has been recognized and approved by such statesmen and philosophers as Thomas Jefferson, John Stuart Mill, Herbert Spencer and other distinguished authors, who have investigated the true foundation and limitations of government. That a prohibitory law comes within neither the principal nor the limitations seems to me obvious upon even a slight consideration of the facts. By no code of morality of which I have heard is it either a sin or a crime to take a drink of liquor, either for medicine or as a beverage; and if it is not a crime to take a drink of liquor it is clearly not a crime to sell or manufacture it. Intemperance is always a sin, and in every civilized community the other business to prevent the abuse and not the use thereof. Prohibition goes much farther than this. It takes away from each individual his natural right, and at the same time punishes the vast majority of those who use liquors in some form or other for the sins of the small minority who abuse them. The administration of justice is the great function of government, whether such government be autocratic in form, or representative and dependent upon the suffrages of the people. While therefore an individ-ual may frequently deny himself to benefit his fellow, he has no just right as a govern-mental factor to compel his Government to act unjustly and punish the innocent to prevent the crimes of the guilty. Second—I am opposed to the prohibitory law because, from the nature of things, I do not think it could be enforced.

It is common to hear advocates of the amendment of a certain class declare that after the amendment has been adopted they expect to use liquor as freely as heretofore, but it may save others from ruin who are now abusing or are hereafter likely to abuse their present liberty. If the advocates of the amendment do not themselves expect to observe it, what warrant is there to conclude that others may not equally evade the law? Has not experience, wherever similar laws have been tried, shown that they were evaded by parties who felt either the necessity or desire?

The administration of this law will rest finally with the people of the different lo-calities throughout the State. The great majority of the people in all the large cities are opposed to the amendment and will elect the officers who are to administer the law. and such as will on their action under the island, it is at their mercy, while the island, it is at their mercy, while the islanders are forced to pay for all these things enjoyed by the part of the ward that is in the city proper.

The effect will be that in some parts of the State attempts will scarcely be made to enforce the law, while in the other parts it will be evaded to a greater or less and $1 are the best values offered.

It is estimated that the amount of capital invested in breweries, distilleries and other property connected with the traffic in Penn-sylvania amounts to the enormous sum of $84,000,000. While I do not believe that the adoption of the amendment will stop the use of liquor, it will without doubt destroy the greater part of this capital which during the last 150 years has been built up under the protection of the laws of the State. When one man takes away or destroys the property of another, outraged law Under any honest code is there any better

We hear daily appeals to voters to place themselves on the moral side of this question. Would it not be well for voters consider also which is the honest side? To me it seems a most discouraging feature of the times, that in the midst of all the dismention that they propose to destroy with-out compensation the value of property worth many millions of dollars. For these reasons I intend to vote against the amendment, and for these reasons like-wise I think other conscientious men should vote against it. Nor, upon a question of such immense importance and fraught with such momentous consequences, do I think that because the chairman of one party has been guilty of corrupt and tricky practices. the spiteful flat of the chairman of the other party will absolve the honest citizen, regardless of party, from the obligation of voting upon the question in accordance with what he conceives to be his duty.

Yours truly, JAMES D. HANCOCK.

(Communicated.) Prohibition Oratory.

If any additional evidence of the futility and stupidity of the prohibition fraud be needed, it might be found in some of the silly speeches concerning the Johnstown flood that have been made by Prohibitionist orators here and there. One of these inter-esting personages in exchange for suppresesting personness in exchange for suppres-sion of the liquor traffic would welcome a Johnstown calamity every month in the year, while another certified that the victims of the cataclysm "were drowned and went to bell." So many of these fellows have been talking and acting like fools that the people have been led to the conclusion that the policy which they advocate in regard to the liquor traffic is foolish also.
